

The hermit thought for a few moments. Then he said, "O King, I see you a famous conqueror, the master of many nations. I see you going from country to country, defeating armies and destroying cities. Men shall call you the 'Fear of the World.' You heap up vast riches, but just after you have married the woman you love grim death strikes you down."

These are the words Attila the Hun was told by a fortune-telling hermit, and they came true.

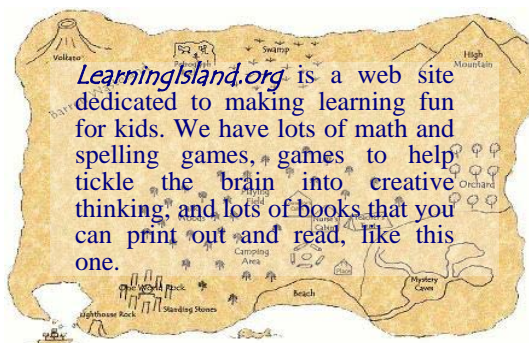

Read of Attila's life in the short biography of one of the fiercest men of all time.
