

There was once a king who was such a good man that his people called him “The Good King.”

One day while he was out hunting, a little rabbit threw itself into his arms. The King’s dogs were chasing it and were about to kill it. The King petted the little animal, and said: “You have jumped in my arms, so no one shall harm you.” He carried the rabbit to his palace, and ordered a pretty little hutch to be made for it.

Find out who the white rabbit really is and how it changes Prince Choi’s life.

Fiction
RL: 4.4
Words: 1954

